Healthcare

Fu Jen Catholic University Hospital

FJCU officially opened the only hospital at a catholic university in the Chinese-speaking world on September 29, 2017. Centered on patients' needs and continuing the catholic tradition of treating the sick as family, we aim to transform the hospital into a future medical center.

The hospital offers 30 departments and close to 300 outpatient rooms. There are 120 doctors, with key areas of expertise being cardiovascular disease, gastroenterology, nephrology, urology, orthopedics, neurology, oncology, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, ophthalmology, otorhinolaryngology, as well as community medicine and health management.

Combining the Expertise of Different Programs

Teaching, research, and clinical resources are combined as part of FJCU's healthcare philosophy and to enhance the value of cross-disciplinary education. The Department of Applied Arts designed the CIS; the Medical Translation program provides translations; the College of Textiles and Clothing designed and created medical uniforms; and the Department of Nutritional Science developed a low-residue diet for colonoscopy procedures. These types of innovative design thinking boost students' competitiveness in the workplace.

FJCU Sports Medicine Center

Combining programs such as physical education, nutritional science, food science, textiles and clothing, and clinical psychology along with the Creative Design Center and specialists in orthopedics, sports medicine, rehab and physiotherapy, FJCU is developing new applications for sports nutrition and supplements, smart clothing, sports psychology, 3D printing, smart glasses, on-site ultrasounds, and cardiopulmonary tests. By pooling program and medical resources, athletes can receive the best care and timely diagnosis and treatment for injuries on the field.

About FJCU

History

Originally established as Fu Jen Academy in Peking by a group of Benedictine monks in 1925, the academy officially became Fu Jen University two years later. "Fu Jen" comes from the Confucian Analects: to make friends through the arts, and to cultivate virtue through such friendships. The Society of the Divine Word took over administration in 1933. Fu Jen was incorporated into Peking Normal University in 1952.

In 1959, the Bishops' Conference, Society of the Divine Word, and the Society of Jesus worked to re-establish Fu Jen in Taiwan, and the university was approved by the MOE the following year. The master's program in philosophy began recruiting in 1961, and undergraduate programs in three colleges officially opened in 1963.

FJCU Today

FJCU is made up of 12 colleges and the School of Continuing Education (SOCE). We offer 50 undergraduate programs, 49 master's programs, 24 in-service master's programs, 12 PhD programs, 16 SOCE bachelor programs, and 1 two-year in-service program. FJCU has partnership agreements with more than 400 institutions worldwide. We have a current student population of 26,000, more than 12,000 alumni from our days in Peking, and over 200,000 since re-establishing in Taiwan. FJCU is a comprehensive university under the direct authority of the Vatican, with degrees recognized by UNESCO, and a respected academic standing in Europe and the Americas.

Alumni

There are 73 program-level alumni associations and 42 alumni associations spread over five continents. Our alumni serve as a bridge to the global community and help promote the academic spirit of Fu Jen.

FJCU also has dual-degree programs with 23 partner institutions.

Enhancing Students' Global Mobility

MOE bursary programs encourage students to expand their horizons by pursuing opportunities overseas, while FJCU offers its own scholarships and bursaries for overseas study. Solid Counseling Record

FJCU regularly wins MOE awards for our performance in counseling international students. The International Student Center and Overseas Chinese Division offer scholarships, guidance for daily life, and direct students to campus activities and student clubs. Free Chinese classes enrich students' experience and deepen their sense of belonging.

Students can learn Hanyu Pinyin, the Zhuyin system used in Taiwan, or both. The Center has published two of its own textbooks and is an authorized test site for the Test of Chinese as a Foreign Language (TOCFL). As part of our Catholic and educational traditions, the center also offers guidance and support to help students adapt to life in Taiwan.
